THE trouble with Jordan is that it is so admirably toy-like. The King is such an attractive young man, the Arab Legion so picturesque, the statements so delightfully unreasonable, the issues so absurdly unreal. No wonder pale-faced Westerners, well-read in Lawrence and looking for excitement, are misled by appearances. The trouble with some of these Westerners is that they are so methodically in earnest. Nasser must be encircled. Jordan is the weakest link in Nasser's chain. Let us remove the link and the chain will collapse. It is like playing chess with a man who does not know the rules of the game. Jordan is not independent. It is a fortuitous alliance. Jordan is a misnomer. It is "The State that Never Was," an honorary title for a man whom the world has never known. Now the protectors have been kicked out, and the holder of the title is a soul in search of a new protector.

WE are told that in backing King Hussein the U.S. is strengthening the area against Communism. In backing Nasser, the military dictator, the U.S.S.R. is breaking down the walls of capitalism. The need for moral backing is understandable, but when remote Great Powers choose to interfere in new areas, they would do well to study such local issues before sounding their trumpets. In these provincial climates people are likely to take you seriously if you enquire about their health and will be disappointed to find the question was purely conventional.

TO any veteran Middle Easterner, the issue is not what creed to adopt, but who is likely to turn out to be the stronger proponent of strength is much closer to the understanding of the average Middle Easterner than the developed democracy of the West. The Russians themselves passed through that complex battle between the developed Western and the undeveloped Eastern. They understand the quest for equal social standing with the powerful foreigner. The Russian revolution, at its core, the revolt of the locally emancipated intelligentsia against foreign ascendancy. It is usual that such nationalistic revolutions are made in the name of the Cosmic Principles of Unity of Mankind. The Russians have also the advantage of being brutally unconcerned with world opinion. It did not escape Arab notice that the rebellious Hungarians received no real help from the U.S. and that Russian tanks entered Budapest unopposed. To the protector seeking Middle Easterner, a protector who does not refuse excuses for withdrawing on moral grounds in mid-action is very much preferable to the subtle Westerner and his underlying bias in favour of fair play.

NOR does it escape the Arab mind, that the only real anti-Communist state in the area is repeatedly ignored by the crusading anti-Communist great powers. Israel is anti-Communist not only because Communism counters the national character of the freedom-loving people, but also because Soviet-sponsored Communism is an anti-Semitic affair from which no good can be expected for the Jewish people. Reports that a summa clause has been introduced in Soviet Russia for Jews have never been denied from authoritative sources. Still, Russia refuses to let those Jews who are willing to go to Israel leave the Soviet Union — exactly in the manner in which North African governments refuse to let their Jewish citizens go. But whenever the West believes it can make a deal with the Arabs by ignoring Israel, it is ready to jump at the chance. Middle Easterners have little respect for such protectors. Ideologies too, have little impact on the Middle East because everybody knows that Russian interest in the area is not affected by a change of rule in Moscow. Would Russia retreat from the Middle East if, say, tomorrow Mr. Kerenky were re-instated in the Kremlin?

THE trouble with the Middle East is that it is not a toy, and people here are very real beings who refuse to follow in their behaviour the predictions of methodical thinkers in European library-rooms. Guy Wint and Peter Calvocoressi, for instance, would like to persuade us in their "Penguin Special" on the Middle Eastern Crisis that the Russians cannot and should not be excluded from the diplomatic affairs of the area. To admit the Russians to the diplomatic game in the Middle East is one thing, but to allow them to enter the area in their "Penguin Special" is another. They say, as if the Middle East were a parlour where a neighbour is invited to make a fourth for a game of bridge. Tel Aviv, April 25.

Egypt Insists on Sole Control of Suez Canal

But to Accept Arbitration

UNITED NATIONS, Wednesday. — Egypt tonight reiterated her claim to run the nationalized Suez Canal on her own terms and, according to observers here, virtually rejected all idea of international control.

The Cairo Government published a policy statement on Canal operation which was sent to U.N. Secretary-General R. H. Hammarskjöld who initiated negotiations on the future of the Canal.

With the statement was a covering letter by Mahmoud Fawzi, the Egyptian Foreign Minister.

Egypt said she agreed to submit disputes over operations and tolls to arbitration. The U.S. won certain changes of detail in its negotiations on the future of the Canal.

Egypt said she agreed to submit disputes over operations and tolls to arbitration. The U.S. won certain changes of detail in its negotiations on the future of the Canal.

It is noted here that the document holds out no prospect of a change in Egypt's policy of basing Israel shipping on the Canal.

It refers to the Constantinople Convention, which assures free passage for all, but indicates that Egypt will continue to claim a state of belligerency towards Israel as justifying the blockade.

The declaration disclosed that the Egyptian Canal authority set up last July to run the Canal would pay the Government five per cent of its total annual revenue as royalty.

A further 25 per cent will be set aside for a special capital and improvements fund to pay for Canal improvements and to meet costs involved in discharging the obligations assumed by the Government in taking over from the International Suez Canal Company.

In addition to promising to cooperate with the users, Egypt said it "will study further appropriate arrangements that could be made for fact-finding consultation and arbitration" on complaints relating to the Canal code.

The policy statement said that a party feeling discriminated against in using the Canal may lodge a complaint with the Canal Authority.

Curie Warns of Cancer Danger from H-Tests

PARIS, Wednesday (Reuters). — The French physicist, Prof. Frederic Joliot-Curie, said here yesterday that radioactive elements in the atmosphere would cause outbreaks of cancer if H-bomb tests were not halted.

Prof. Joliot-Curie, a Nobel Prize winner and former French High Commissioner for Atomic Energy, said in a speech that the radioactive element Strontium-90 produced by explosions of atomic and hydrogen bombs "falls slowly and continually to the earth with dust and rain and comes to rest on vegetation."

He stated, "Men and domestic animals eat these plants and their organism will thus absorb the Strontium — harmful because of its radioactivity. If these experiments are not stopped, the amount of Strontium affecting man, and in particular among children who are growing, will certainly reach a level sufficient to cause numerous bone cancers."

Czechs Claim Finding NATO Spy Ring

PRAGUE, Wednesday (Reuters). — The Czech authorities claim to have uncovered a spy organization directed by organized by NATO.

A statement said one member of the network, a Czech named Dr. Josef Mayer, was under arrest for handing economic and political information to a "high officer of NATO" in Prague disguised as a Western diplomat.

It said security organs had uncovered "enemy activity conducted by enemy agents on our territory" run by NATO spy centres in Stuttgart, Paris and other West European cities where NATO units are stationed.

AFTER MIDNIGHT

The West German Interior Ministry yesterday offered a reward of 10,000 marks for information leading to the arrest of unknown persons who decorated a Jewish cemetery at Nalagitter, Lower Saxony, last Saturday. A Government spokesman told a press conference that the Government is "most seriously concerned about this hideous crime."

Security Council Meeting Tomorrow

UNITED NATIONS, Wednesday. — The Security Council is to meet on Friday at the request of the U.S. "to take note of" the Suez Canal situation.

The request was made in a letter to Sir Piers Dixon of Britain, this month's President of the Council.

The U.S. was prepared to report to the Council on its negotiations with the Egyptian Government concerning the Canal's operation.

The request came as Egypt issued in Cairo a memorandum on its plan for operating the vital waterway. (See Col. 2)

It was learned in Jerusalem last night that the Government has not yet decided whether to ask permission to attend the Security Council session as an "interested party." Feelers have been put out to ascertain how the permanent members of the Council would react to such a request.

A U.S. spokesman said he did not believe his delegation would ask the Council to make any decision or take any specific action at present. He reiterated that there was no "impasse" between the U.S. and Egypt.

The U.S. did not think that specific action by the Council just now would help to narrow the gap between the Egyptian position and the principles adopted by the Council last October, the spokesman indicated.

'Tribune' Correspondent Expelled from Egypt

CAIRO, Wednesday (Reuters). — An official Egyptian source said last night that Mr. Barrett McGurn, "New York Herald-Tribune" correspondent, had been "expelled from Egypt because on several occasions he fabricated reports detrimental to Egypt."

Mr. McGurn was advised on Monday night that he must leave the next morning, the source said. He left by air for Rome yesterday.

He is the first American correspondent to be asked to leave Egypt since last year, when Eileen Travis of the London "Daily Mail" was expelled.

USSR Says Israel Being Used to Provoke Arabs

LONDON, Wednesday (Reuters). — A Moscow commentator said tonight that the Near and Middle East situation was extremely tense and "contains the danger of an outbreak of new military operations."

The commentator, A. Buturin, declared "The blame for this situation lies fully on the U.S., Britain and France as well as on the Israeli agitators, who are trying by all means to force their domination on the peoples of the Arab countries."

Western imperialist circles were attempting to "make use of the Israeli soldiery to instigate a new dangerous provocation against the Arab states."

Bulgarian Warns Macmillan Of Dangers of Nuclear Warfare

MOSCOW, Wednesday (Reuters). — Premier Nikolai Bulganin warned Britain of the dangers of nuclear warfare in a letter published today, appealing for new measures to improve Anglo-Soviet relations.

His 5,000-word letter, published in the Soviet press, was sent to the Prime Minister Harold Macmillan last Saturday.

The Soviet Premier urged the British Cabinet to help find effective methods "for radical improvement in Anglo-Soviet relations." The two countries must play a very important, if not decisive, role in easing international tension, he said.

Commenting on the utility of the arms race and the dangers of atomic war, Marshal Bulganin said the existence of large armies, facing each other with up-to-date and highly destructive weapons, created "a very dangerous situation."

After calling for an end to warlike competition, he asked, "What remains to be said of the consequences of bombardment by hydrogen bombs or thermonuclear weapons on such a comparatively small and densely populated territory as the British Isles?"

Marshal Bulganin went on to say that his words did not imply threat or intimidation. "They have been prompted only by the desire to state my views openly, not evading the serious questions raised by the situation and in the most friendly spirit."

NEW DELHI, Wednesday (Reuters). — India has no intention of exchanging diplomatic representatives with Israel either "now or in the foreseeable future," an External Affairs Ministry spokesman said today. He said it would "not be advisable" in the "present context."

Herzog Confers With Legion Commander

The Jerusalem Area Commander, Aluf-Mishne Haim Herzog, met yesterday with Colonel Malik Saadi, Arab Legion Jerusalem Area Commander, for their second meeting in two weeks. They discussed the border situation in the light of the disturbed conditions in Jordan.

The meeting took place in the quiet of no-man's-land where the two area commanders sat at a table in conference while a few yards away, in the Old City, armed and steel-helmeted patrols of Legionnaires were very much in evidence.

The report criticized Israel for at first refusing to permit Truce Supervisors to enter the zone from the Syrian side to investigate the Syrian complaint. Syria's complaint was that the Legion had been building military fortifications on Arab lands.

When UN military observers tried to inspect the work on March 29, they were halted by Israeli policemen about 120 metres from the Jordan River's east bank. They returned to Syria. Israel permitted an inspection on April 7. Israel authorities explained that the 100-foot long bridge had been built in connection with the reclamation project to convey earth-moving equipment to the southern end of the lake.

UN Observers found on April 20 that the bridge had been lengthened to 120 feet and had a potential load capacity of 45 tons. The report, by Chief of Staff of the UNTSO, stated:

"The bridge has not been built on Arab-owned lands and construction does not prejudice the interests of any Arab civilians in the demilitarized zone. Although the bridge could be used for military purposes, the Acting Chief of Staff is satisfied, after his personal investigation on the spot and the conversations he has had on the matter that the bridge has been erected in connection with a view to facilitating its completion."

"Accordingly, he does not think, despite the possible military value of the bridge, that he would be justified in asking for its removal. Such a request would have to be based on the assumption that a party would use the bridge for military purposes in violation of the provisions of the General Armistice Agreement, an assumption which the Acting Chief of Staff is not entitled to consider."

Peled Named Jerusalem Area Commander

Aluf-Mishne Matityahu Peled has been appointed Jerusalem Area Commander replacing Aluf-Mishne Haim Herzog, the Army spokesman announced yesterday. The appointment is effective from May 7.

Aluf-Mishne Peled, 28, was Military Commander of the Gaza Strip from February 25 till the evacuation of Israel forces.

He was born in Haifa and went to school in Jerusalem. In 1938, he joined the Hagana and in 1942 the Palmach. From 1946 till the end of 1947, when he returned to Israel, he studied law at London University.

During the War of Independence, he was a company commander in the Givati Brigade, taking part in the Negev fighting. In the regular army, he served in administrative and headquarters posts, and also studied in Britain.

U.N. Upholds Israel Right to Hula Bridge

UNITED NATIONS, Wednesday (UP). — The U.N. Truce Supervision Organization ruled today that Israel acted within its right in building a bridge in the demilitarized zone separating Syria from Israel.

The UNTSO, reporting to the Security Council on a complaint lodged by Syria on March 26, said the bridge, at the outlet of Lake Hula, could be used for military purposes, but added that it obviously had been built in connection with the Hula land reclamation project.

The report criticized Israel for at first refusing to permit Truce Supervisors to enter the zone from the Syrian side to investigate the Syrian complaint. Syria's complaint was that the Legion had been building military fortifications on Arab lands.

AMMAN, Wednesday. — King Hussein today laid the blame for Jordan's political crisis at the door of international Communism and predicted he would take drastic action against the opposition within 24 hours.

AMMAN, Wednesday (Reuters). — Semi-official reports here tonight said that the Government of Hussein Khalidi has resigned after nine days in office and martial law will be imposed over Jordan tomorrow.

Riots in Towns

The pro-Egyptian opposition bloc in Jordan yesterday called off for 48 hours their agitation for the resignation of Hussein Khalidi's Cabinet, in order to give him time to take a decision. Despite a day of nation-wide riots, the Premier declared last night that he is remaining in office.

The left-wing nationalists unleashed the force of thousands of demonstrators poured into the streets in the first open move against Khalidi's pro-Western Government, according to U.P. from Amman.

At the same time, it was reported that Jordan yesterday closed her frontier with Syria.

Khalidi conferred with King Hussein for 90 minutes last night. Later he declared, "I have not resigned. I cannot say any more."

Legion in Control

Riots swept through Amman, the Old City of Jerusalem, Nablus, Ramallah and Jericho. Arab Legionnaires and police, however, kept the situation under control. Elsewhere conditions were obscure because of a news blackout. In Amman, about a dozen persons were injured in stone-throwing incidents when police and soldiers foiled attempts to march on the main post office and the Government buildings.

The B.B.C. correspondent in the Jordan capital said that the Government had effective control of the demonstrations despite their widespread character. He reported that Legion forces took up strategic positions in the town where demonstrators were held, and that Legionnaires blocked all entrances to Amman to prevent the entry of riotous elements.

The bulk of the demonstrators were youths. They shouted anti-West slogans. About 500 persons assembled outside the Premier's office, calling for his resignation.

The Arab News Agency said that the special committee inquiring into the recent unrest in the Legion has submitted a preliminary report to the Government and is continuing its investigation.

The R.B.C. last night confirmed Arab reports that a general strike had been proclaimed.

Meanwhile, the Jordan press reported that budgets for various ministries are being continuously cut because of a growing shortage of funds. Editorially, "A-Diffa" wrote that the Jordan press campaign print all it knew "lest the situation deteriorate further."

'King Can Win Only By Breaking Law'

LONDON, Wednesday (Reuters). — The "Daily Telegraph" today stated the dilemma of King Hussein of Jordan as that he can hope to save his country only by doing what his enemies accuse him of doing covertly — resort to unconstitutional rule.

No Government resistant to Egyptian pretensions and Communist influence could command a majority in the present Jordan parliament, this Conservative newspaper commented.

"If he decided to suspend the Constitution, the King would still have to tread warily. He could count on the loyalty of his Beduin subjects, but a majority of the army and of the civil population are Palestinians, on whom Egyptian politicians have a strong hold."

A decisive factor would be the degree of support that Saudi Arabia and Iraq were prepared to give to King Hussein."

LAW REPORT

The Jerusalem Post April 23, 1957

In the Supreme Court

Sitting as Court of Criminal Appeal

Before Justices Sussman, Ben-Zion and Ben-Ner

Muhammad Ahmed Swita, Appellant v. The Attorney-General, Respondent

Limitation in Criminal Procedure According to Gregorian Calendar

The Supreme Court dismissed an appeal against a judgment of the Haifa District Court (Cr. A. 99/56) of November 9, 1956 (Cr. A. 99/56).

On July 8, 1952, the appellant Swita made a sworn declaration before a magistrate, which was then handed in to the Haifa Registration Office for the purpose of acquiring an identity card. The affidavit contained, amongst other things, a declaration as to the appellant's name.

Then, in April 1955, Swita made another sworn affidavit to the Haifa Registration Office in connection with an application for change of name. A comparison of this affidavit with the previous one revealed a discrepancy in the name of the appellant in the latter. The matter was referred to the Minorities Office in the office of the District Representative, who after making enquiries, could find no reasonable explanation for the discrepancy. The Director of the Registration Office then referred the matter to the police, who opened a file on June 19, 1955, and on June 29, 1955, the police sergeant in charge of the investigation received Swita's file from the registration office. On the next day a court order allowing the police to keep the file was obtained. The file was then referred to the police, who opened a file on June 19, 1955, and on June 29, 1955, the police sergeant in charge of the investigation received Swita's file from the registration office.

The respondent's Court held that no trial could take place since the period during which a criminal case could be brought, as defined in Sections 431 and 432 of the Ottoman Code of Criminal Procedure, had lapsed. These sections state that the time limit for bringing a charge in cases of felony is 10 years and in cases of misdemeanour three years, as from the day on which the offence or misdemeanour was committed. If during this period "no steps in the investigation or prosecution have been taken," either of the latter events constitutes a step to the course of the limitation period.

The Haifa District Court overruled the decision of the Magistrate's Court, on the operative one in the case of the Ottoman Law of Criminal Procedure — the Ottoman calendar, which was based on a lunar year (in which case the period of limitation had lapsed, in all circumstances); or the Gregorian calendar, which is based on a solar year of 365 days (in which case it could be argued that the period of limitation had not lapsed, depending on the definition of "investigation").

The representatives of the Attorney-General based their argument in favour of the Gregorian calendar on three grounds: that it is the custom in Israel to construe "year" as meaning a year according to the Gregorian calendar; that that was the intention of the legislator as could be gathered from the dates on the appellant's card, and thirdly, that if reference is made to the source of the law — which is a verbatim copy of a parallel French law — it will be found that the meaning of "year" is the Gregorian year.

Mr. Lavhar appeared for the appellant and Dr. Elitias, Deputy State Attorney, assisted by Dr. Elitias, appeared for the respondent.

Justice Ben-Ner, who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court, dealt with each of the above arguments in turn. After a short survey of judicial and legal opinions he concluded that during the Mandate there had been no ruling as to which calendar to apply to limitation in Ottoman laws on criminal procedure, whereas in civil procedure it had been held that the meaning assigned to the term "year," in the Ottoman law, except in land cases, varied in accordance with the intention of the parties expressing agreement could be found in the date used on the document which formed the basis of the action. In land cases a Mandatory law promulgated in 1925 specifically lays down that in every provision in any Ottoman law concerning immovable property fixing the period within which any action may be heard, the term "year" shall be deemed to refer to a year according to the Gregorian calendar, this law having dispelled the innumerable difficulties of interpretation previously encountered by the courts.

In talking of "custom," therefore, he continued, there is no doubt that during the Mandate the Gregorian year was not in universal use, either in ordinary everyday life or in court procedure, and while it might be permissible to presume that since the establishment of the State a certain amount of progress had been made towards the universal use of the Gregorian year, this had not been proved by expert evidence. He doubted, therefore, whether the Supreme Court could take it upon itself to declare that the dates of the law were indicative of the intention of the legislator, Justice Ben-Ner pointed out that with regard to other Ottoman laws the courts had attributed no significance whatsoever to the dates used by the legislator for the purpose of arriving at periods of limitation.

The respondent's last argument, however, he continued, deserved a different fate. He agreed that when the courts encountered some obscurity in, or some difficulty over, interpreting an Ottoman law adopted from a foreign law, then reference could be made to the original law. (See also H.C. 68/56, P.D. 10/1956, Law Report of 12/11/56). There, the courts had attributed no significance whatsoever to the dates used by the legislator for the purpose of arriving at periods of limitation.

Having established what calendar should be used, Justice Ben-Ner then considered the facts of the case. As the appellant had been committed to prison on November 11, 1952, the period of limitation had lapsed unless it could be shown that an investigation had been instituted before July 4, 1953.

He then considered the definition of "investigation" in the parallel French law, with reference to Garraud's book, "Traité de Pratique de la Justice," concluding that it referred to an investigation instituted by the official police authorities. In the present case, the investigation received the stamp of authority when the first actual step was taken by the police after the opening of a criminal case against the appellant. This first step consisted of the police's application to the Registration Office for the granting of a court order on the matter. This had happened on June 29 and 30, 1955, which was just less than three years since the offence had been committed.

Justice Ben-Ner, who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court, dealt with each of the above arguments

Technion Battling Accident Rate

HAIFA, Wednesday. — Some 24,000 persons were injured in industrial accidents in Israel last year, a Technion spokesman revealed yesterday. He said this figure represented one of the highest accident rates in the world.

He warned that the rate was likely to become even higher with the current expansion of industry in Israel, unless immediate steps are taken to train responsible personnel in the field of Safety Engineering, and unless the industrial public is made increasingly aware of the dangers involved.

Safety legislation here is based on the British pattern, and local machinery is generally up-to-date and fitted with the prescribed safety devices; yet there are over 200 persons casualties in Israel as in the U.K., the Technion spokesman declared. The chief reasons for this appear to be the lack of ingrained tradition of respect for safety, and lack of skills among new immigrants.

To combat this situation, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Hygiene has enlisted the help of the Technion, which is sponsoring a series of courses in Safety Engineering. The first of these, given recently in Haifa, had a capacity of 200 students, and was attended by 150. They had spent over a week at a camp in huts without windows and had suffered from the cold, especially the children whom they had

Theatre Club Opening

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER

TEL AVIV, Wednesday. — A Parisian-type boite will be added to Tel Aviv's night life when the new Theatre Club is inaugurated shortly.

The Club, which is situated under the Tourist Information Office at the corner of Rehov Mendele and Ben-Yehuda, founded by Mr. Yosef Milo of the Chamber Theatre, and Mr. Y. Kadishon. About IL2,500 have been invested in equipping the club.

The idea of the club is to create a common ground where the artist and theatre-loving public can meet. Mr. Milo said. Entry will be by membership (IL2 couple monthly). It would be entirely different from the usual type of bar and night-club found in town, he stressed.

He also condemned the NATO, which he blamed for dividing Europe into two antagonistic military alignments.

Britain and France, after big losses in the war against Germany, were placed in the peculiar situation of using big powerful nuclear weapons as military weapons as restored Western Germany "with the active support and vigorous encouragement on the part of the United States."

"Even the most hopeless sceptics should understand that the Soviet Government, not less than the Government of some other countries, realises the use of atomic weapons by one side would call forth their use by the other, and understands what such developments hold out even for the Soviet Union, with its vast resources and progress in anti-atomic defence," it was stated.

'Mixed Multitude' of 1,500 Newcomers Disembark at Haifa

By YA'ACOV ARDON, Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA, Wednesday. — "A mixed multitude" — as the Bible puts it (Exodus 12) — of about 1,500 immigrants from Europe, North Africa and Egypt, arrived early this morning in the Argentinian liner Salta.

Side by side on the deck, leaning against the railing and looking down on the port and up at the Carmel, stood people with the mentality and clothes of the 20th century — as exemplified by an airport construction engineer — and the unskilled hawkers and petty peddlers of the ghettos of North Africa, whose style of life has changed little for generations except for the addition of wireless sets.

From Egypt came 60 refugees, mostly white collar workers, whom Nasser threw out of their country, homes and occupations. The passenger list reflected the diversity of origin in the spelling of names. "Shalom," a frequent name, Salom, Sholom, Chalom, Salom.

Start at Marseilles

The ingathering began at Marseilles where the migrants from East and West first met. The North Africans had been waiting there in camps for some time until transport became available. Those from Europe related that the Jewish Agency's Immigration Department had apparently not been prepared for their arrival. They had spent over a week at a camp in huts without windows and had suffered from the cold, especially the children whom they had

Jewish Refugees Now Dominican Deputy

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Wednesday (INA). — The Jewish immigrant manager of a colony for refugees from Nazi persecution in the Dominican Republic, stated at a symposium on problems of new immigration absorption held by the Dominican Association in the Hadassah Executive building last night.

Some 1,200 Jews would have to be absorbed in the coming years from Middle East and East European countries. The country had decided to take in a maximum of 100,000 immigrants per year though double that figure would come tomorrow if we could take them in, Mr. Braginsky noted.

Processing of the arrivals lasted until late at night. When the 6,000-ton Turkish steamer Marmara arrived in the afternoon, only some 50 passengers came ashore.

To mark the resumption of her passenger service between Turkey and Israel, the master of the Marmara and her agents held a reception on board yesterday. Only some 50 passengers came ashore.

Call to Guard Jewish German Cemeteries

HAMBURG, Wednesday (Reuter). — The Hamburg Society for Christian-Jewish Co-operation yesterday called for "guards of honour" to prevent desecration of Jewish cemeteries in West Germany. The Chairman of the Society, Mr. Erich Lueck, said the desecration of three cemeteries in recent months was creating a new gulf between Jews and Germans.

The latest desecration was reported by police at Gitter, Lower Saxony, on Saturday — the anniversary of Hitler's birthday.

In Bonn, Chancellor Adenauer's Christian Democratic Party (CDU) sharply denounced the desecration of the Jewish cemetery. The party's official press service described the desecration as a "shocking crime."

Primate of Finland On Week's Tour Here

Archbishop Ilmar Salomies, Primate of Finland, and Mrs. Kiri Salomies arrived in Israel yesterday for a week's tour of the country as guests of the Government. They were welcomed at Lydda Airport by Dr. S.Z. Caban, Director-General of the Ministry for Religious Affairs, and by Dr. Ch. Vardi, the Ministry's Counselor on Christian Affairs. Also present were Dr. Arnon, President of the Israel-Finland Association, and Mr. Z. Segal, Honorary Secretary of the Israel-Finland Association.

During their stay, Archbishop and Mrs. Salomies will visit Jerusalem, Ashdod, Beersheba, Tel Aviv, Rehovot, Haifa and Galilee.

The Archbishop, prior to his appointment was for many years Professor of Church History at the University of Helsinki. He is a well-known scholar of the medieval and 18th century periods of the Finnish Church. During World War II, he aided Finnish Jews persecuted by the Nazis. Mrs. Salomies is a well-known author of youth and children's books.

It was the first time that the head of a North European Church is visiting Israel.

Luggage Bottleneck

The Agency's Immigration Department had the 2,700 pieces of luggage — less than two per person — stored in the ship's hold with proper order. The passenger could not disembark until their luggage was assembled in the passenger terminal, as otherwise they would have to wait until the terminal building.

A similar hitch occurred recently in the S.S. Mediterranean, when the disembarkation and onward movement of some 600 newcomers was delayed.

An Immigration Department official sent to escort the newcomers from Marseilles to Haifa explained that he had no experience in that type of work, but that it had been his turn to make the trip.

Processing of the arrivals lasted until late at night. When the 6,000-ton Turkish steamer Marmara arrived in the afternoon, only some 50 passengers came ashore.

The Maccabi-Hapoel teams showed little cohesion or even fighting spirit, and only for a moment at the start of the second half held the initiative, scoring its two goals. For a time they looked like equalizing, after being 2-0 down at half-time.

The star juggler of the Reda XI, outside right Tereze, scored the first goal after 15 minutes, the ball coming through Ben Dor's legs; the outside right Nonio shot the second goal after a neat through pass, and outside left Gell scored with a 20-metre drive on the run that had the ball curving before the crowd or goalkeepers could react.

Three minutes after the interval, Redier, Hapoei-Maccabi outside left, headed in from a Glaser corner, and five minutes later, Glaser himself scored a fine goal, after a solo run down the right wing. A minute later, Redier was again through on his own, but ballooned the ball over the bar. At the other end, Visakor divered full length to save a dangerous shot.

But the visitors again took command. In the 25th minute, Eliaz, centre left, and Gred, the inside forward, added further goals, to give the Redifs a well-deserved victory.
